

Labor Law 101: Employer Rights and Unions

Event

03.06.2018

On April 17, Fredrikson attorney Rick Ross presented a program addressing the structure and function of the National Labor Relations Act and how this can impact non-union employers. This program looked at how policies in non-union shops may violate the National Labor Relations Act, including policies on email communication, social media usage, confidentiality, non-fraternization or harassment, and access to company property. A link to the program recording can be found here.

For more information on this program contact Rick Ross at rross@fredlaw.com. For more information on Fredrikson & Byron's Employment & Labor practice, please contact Teresa Thompson at tthompson@fredlaw.com