

Litigator Amanda Mills Joins Fredrikson & Byron

Firm News

12.19.2019

Attorney Amanda M. Mills has joined Fredrikson & Byron as an associate in the firm's Litigation Group.

Mills (formerly, Sicoli) works with her clients to navigate through a wide range of business disputes, including complex commercial litigation, banking and financial services litigation, real estate and landlord-tenant related matters, white collar criminal defense and internal investigations. She supports clients throughout all stages of litigation and provides guidance to help businesses avoid litigation whenever possible.

Mills is consistently recognized as a North Star Lawyer by the Minnesota State Bar Association for her work on numerous pro bono cases. She volunteers with the VLN Housing Court Project, The Advocates for Human Rights and the Knox Alumni Mentoring Program. Mills is the Secretary of the Board of Directors of Find Your Power, a local non-profit that connects underrepresented women worldwide with resources that further education, advocacy, community and employment.

Mills previously served as a clerk for the Honorable Patrick J. Schiltz in the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota. She received her J.D. from William Mitchell College of Law.
